

Small-acreage owners, we need your help with an exciting new project!

The Small Acreage Outreach Project's mission is to provide useful tools and information to promote sustainable stewardship of small acreages in Wyoming. We do this through publication of Barnyards & Backyards magazine, promotion of workshops throughout the state, barnyardsandbackyards.com, and other user-friendly, concise and informative tools. One new tool we are creating is a video about sustainable grazing practices on small acreages. This video will be in four parts – spring, summer, fall, and winter. Once finished, this video will be available as a DVD or on the Internet. One important element of this video is having representative small acreages to film. We'd like to showcase examples of the great work small-acreage owners are doing on their properties across Wyoming.

University of Wyoming Cooperative Extension Service Educator Barton Stam and his son, Zane, participate in a branding.

If you have a small acreage that needs some improvement we'd also like to hear from you. Your participation will be very helpful in making this video a successful aid for small-acreage owners in Wyoming and elsewhere. Please contact us if you would be willing to be one of our featured landowners or if you'd like to nominate someone you know who has done an excellent job managing his or her small-acreage pasture.

You can contact us at or send nominations to:

Barton Stam

UW Cooperative Extension Service educator

e-mail: brstam@uwyo.edu;

Telephone: (307) 864-3421

Mailing address: Barton Stam, UW Cooperative Extension Service, 328 Arapahoe, Thermopolis, WY 82443-2706.